Mollie

By : Loving Mallory

I wrote this poem for my best friend in the whole world. She's been there for me every step of the way and I can't imagine life without her.

Published on Booksie

booksie.com/Loving Mallory

Copyright © Loving Mallory, 2013
Publish your writing on Booksie.com.

Mollie

Mollie.

You were the first one I knew. It was a new town , new school.

You walked over and said hello.

And that was It . Our future began, fate set. We were great for eachother, minds alike.

We wen't on adventures , Told stories , shared jokes and were there to hold one another.

You were there to pick me up when I fell. And told me stories until I fell asleep. You were the best thing this place ever gave me.

Your what keeps me going. The only thing that stops me from giving up for good, you keep me sane.

You like to ask "Why me, Mallory?"

I can only think it was meant to be. Years later our friendship has grown. You make me want to be better. Your the best thing I've ever known.

Some people search a life time to find that true friend. I found mine. I'll be there with you until the end, Your partner in crime. We'll travel the world and grow old together. We'll be eighty years old and look back on that one day. That first hello, the time our future began. When fate was set. Your my sister mollie. My one true friend.

Mollie

Created from Booksie.com

Generated: 2013-05-21 20:15:16