A Year Without My Special Friend

By : claireabell

this poem is dedicated to my friend who died in a car crash

Published on Booksie

booksie.com/claireabell

Copyright © claireabell, 2013
Publish your writing on Booksie.com.

A Year Without My Special Friend

When I first saw you at a glance

I knew straight away, I didnâ t have a chance

You skin had a nice bronze glow

And a six pack you wasnâ t afraid to show

Then all of a sudden you walked towards me

I thought â what on earth did you seeâ

But then your clear voice said â love, how are you todayâ

You then left me speechless, I didnâ t know what to say

He wrapped his fingers around my curly blonde hair

Just for that moment, I didnâ t have a care

The next day, we walked hand in hand

For miles and miles over the warm squelchy sand

Then you asked me â will you be my oneâ

â Yesâ I called and suddenly all my worries were gone

There are many more memories, I have of you

I always thought it would be just us two

I still think about you every day

It was a year this May

A year without my special friend

Why did your life have to end?

In that crash, it should have been my life and not yours

All I was left with is a few sores

And the heartbreak and sadness of that horrible may

I love you... like I have done everyday

Created from Booksie.com

Generated: 2013-05-25 09:43:54