

The Wizard Table

The Wizard Table

By : saraibrahim

An idea I had for a book.

Published on Booksie

booksie.com/saraibrahim

Copyright © saraibrahim, 2015
Publish your writing on Booksie.com.

Table of Contents

The Wizard Table Chapter 1

The Wizard Table

"Maddie, I need a detective. One-good- with homicide and cops are ok for this one and I need another specialist on myths. Arnold can find out for you. Oh and would you bring up some carrot sticks?"

"Sure." Maddie even voice revealed none of the resentment her usually face does. $\frac{1}{2}$ Benni could hear Maddie yell some muffled instructions at Arnold who responds in a frenzy of cussing that made Benni purse her lips. Benni woke her computer from its sleep and ran a search on wizards as she waited for Meddie to finish.

"Consider it done. Oh and James is on his way up with the carrots" Maddie said into the receiver.

$\frac{1}{2}$ "Thanks, Meddie." $\frac{1}{2}$ The phone call ended. $\frac{1}{2}$ Benni replaced the reciver on the hook. She stood up and unlocked her reinforced door leaving the security chain in its hooked position. She sets to work destroying her last identity. She pulled out a ring of keys and picked one of the smallest she stepped in front of her filling cabinet and opened the magnetic lock. She went under the letter E and found the name Eliza. Picking it up she thought of finding a good way to kill Eliza as a target; death, paralysis, and memory loss all sounded good. Death was the safest, but it required a certain amount of manipulation and planning.

Benni placed the file into to do bin she had placed near her work station and put on her latex gloves. Carefully she placed the letter and the envelope into separate Ziploc bags.

$\frac{1}{2}$ Then she prayed that calling a detective wasn't necessary and that Phrixus had escaped with his life.

$\frac{1}{2}$

The Wizard Table

Created from Booksie.com

Generated: 2015-01-31 23:42:58