A Pretty Red Valentine

By : Stormbird Throneshaker

Poem 01/28/2012

Published on Booksie

booksie.com/Stormbird Throneshaker

Copyright © Stormbird Throneshaker, 2014 Publish your writing on Booksie.com.

A Pretty Red Valentine

Sometimes I go, way out there, and you don't care, to bring me back

Some things that I do, thinking that it's cool, but I'm just a fool, and way off track.

Sometimes I think, that it's wise

but it's no surprise, what can I do

This heart that I show, like a red valentine,

I wish it was mine, and belonged to you.

A pretty red valentine, let me down

It's all over town, cause it was you

A pretty red rose, in a green vase

was thrown in my face, it made me blue.

Sometimes I know, I'm way out there, but I don't care, you ain't coming back

Some things that I do, thinking that it's cool,

you called me a fool, it made me crack.

Sometimes I think, that it's wise to live my life, and then forget you

This heart that I show, like a red valentine,

Oh yes it was mine, got shot in two.

A pretty red valentine, let me down

It's all over town, cause it was you

A pretty red rose, in a green vase

was thrown in my face, it made me blue.

A Pretty Red Valentine

A pretty red valentine, a pretty red rose like red blood flows, my love was true

But roses will die, and so will I and where will I go, I haven't a clue.

Created from Booksie.com

Generated: 2014-04-19 09:53:00