More Then Words Can Tell, Mothers Day

May 12, 1996. my birth day, it was also mothers day.
That day I came into this world giving my mom her first baby girl that mothers day my mom went through a lot of pain, but in the end she cried and gave me a name I wish I could tell you how much it meant to me to be given a chance to live and be on the family tree I could never begin to tell you how much it means to me to have a mom like you fun and loving, your always there beautiful and caring your why Iâ m here when ever I fell, when ever I cried you were my trusting friend my shoulder to cry every day of my short little life, I thought about what I could possibly do to show you I love you I do the dishes when you don't ask, I take care of kids and make them laugh I try to be the best daughter I can be to show you just what you mean to me but some times life is tough we fight we yell our voices get rough sometimes we say things we don't mean I know I have but after I come out of my room I see you your young, your beautiful, your my mom and even if the world ends I can never change that so when I grow up I want to be just like you I want to be able to stare people in the eye and tell them how much I care I want to see the world for what it is, beautiful and there just like you someday I want people to ask me what makes you so happy?
Know what my answer is?
You everything that I will and have done the person I'll someday become it was all because you were there for me thick and thin, your there to the end and even though Iâ m a teenager now and sometimes I don't want to obey your law all I really want to do is make you proud so on this mothers day all I could really say is thank you so much for letting me live today so enjoy this mothers day, you deserve more then one day and now my poem has come to an end but I still have one final thing to say I love you mommy, and I always will Happy Mothers Day
