

Introduction (Huck Wilson)

By : curtis

This is a letter to my son.

Published on
Booksie

booksie.com/curtis

Copyright © curtis, 2015

Publish your writing on Booksie.com.

Introduction (Huck Wilson)

Introduction

(Huck Wilson)

I write this introduction to my son Kaleb Anderson Huck Wilson. The reason I have chosen to do this is because it his introduction into the mind of his father. It is where he will learn that his father is/was a writer( (amateur that may be), a writer nonetheless.

His name Huck was inspired a great American author-Mark Twain. While this will not be like any of Twain's works, I believe he would have enjoyed it just the same.

I wish I could tell you all about this world from the beginning; (in private away from any current readers), but I fear I cannot for not knowing myself.

I have not ever used an outline nor will I ever use one. I do not want my world mapped out and waiting on me top arrive to it. I want to journey through my world of magic on that of a pen; (or should I say Word Perfect).

Oh, I know some pieces here and there. There will be elves, dwarves, orcs, mages, just to name a few. Then there is also old Feddly Hubbindar who once learned a spell. Don't ask for I just thought of that one myself.

You see, I am the creator of this world. I am kind of like the God who uses words to form lands and beings that have individual lives. They live and die at my hand. Don't worry, I'm not having delusions of grandeur, son.

I don't know where this road may take me. I know it will be mystical lands filled with a wealth of possibilities. This world due to my imaginations has no boundaries.

So, strap in and get ready for what I hope is the ride of your life. Just know we made this journey the same way, one page at a time.

She was going to live so as to go to the good place."

Huckleberry Finn

Introduction (Huck Wilson)

Introduction (Huck Wilson)

Created from Booksie.com

Generated: 2015-01-25 10:05:38