

I Don't Like Shiny Metal Objects

By : Juggernaut

350 tons of gold is imported to turn into gold jewelry each year in India. Is it not crazy in a country where basic sanitary facilities are at ground-zero level.

Published on Booksie

booksie.com/Juggernaut

Copyright © Juggernaut, 2015
Publish your writing on Booksie.com.

I Don't Like Shiny Metal Objects

I don't like Shiny Metal Objects

Subba Rao

â How come you don't wear your wedding band?

â I don't like jewelry,â Juggernaut looked at Dan with a look why you are asking me this.

â No jewelry at all?

â I don't like to wear shiny things, period.

â Why?â Dan looked at Juggernaut though not facing him directly.

â I consider Jewelry is something to watch in a glass case at a museum.

â Are you saying that millions of people that wear jewelry are crazy?

â No, I don't feel comfortable wearing any kind of jewelry.

â So, you never wear jewelry any time in your life.

â My mother could have been responsible for me to wear jewelry as a child in celebrations of some kind. But as a young man I never wore jewelry of any kind, I thought wearing shiny things is tacky.

â You know India imports 550 tons of pure gold and 1200 tons of silver every year to keep up with local demand for jewelry.

â I feel sad that so much money that can be used for more productive purposes are frozen in form of jewelry just make people feel good about themselves.

â Investment in gold is a smart thing since its value is always on the rise all the time.

â Sure, but how many people buy gold jewelry to sell to make profit, perhaps none; gold as an investment is different from buying gold as jewelry,â â To turn 550 tons of gold into jewelry is like freezing life saving blood into a solid block, unusable and useless.

â You invest in gold then not gold jewelry?

â No, I don't gather shiny objects, only crows do.

I Don't Like Shiny Metal Objects

I Don't Like Shiny Metal Objects

Created from Booksie.com

Generated: 2015-02-26 20:22:46