

Survived a love potion

Survived a love potion

By : Psychosis The Tormented

A young man who has the misfortune of having a crush , has to go through a lot to survive . Based on a true experience that I've had .

Published on Booksie

booksie.com/Psychosis The Tormented

Copyright © Psychosis The Tormented , 2015
Publish your writing on Booksie.com.

Survived a love potion

Jeff was sitting in class waiting for the clock strike one more minute so he can be through with this torturous college algebra class. It was his first year of college and Jeff was failing at everything. The last class had was a computer class he was also failing in the only good news was he didn't have to do any work in the class. The class was a work at your own pace class and since he was failing anyway he didn't bother to try to do any work , most time he would just surf the web till the class was over. After his algebra class dismissed , Jeff ran to the computer lab where his computer lab was held. He liked getting the early so he could be by himself , for a few minutes and just lay his head on the desk and sleep.

A few minutes later other students arrived and Jeff raised his head and pretended to to work. He was so far behind in the class he couldn't even catch up if he wanted to, and his instructor really wasn't a caring teacher so he continuously failed and no one helped him. When the other students came in the classroom became noisy with the sound of people conversing to each other. Jeff hated this ,on top it being annoying to him, he never had any friends to talk to himself , which always made him depressed. On top of that it seemed like people always did everything in their power to avoid him. Until the class ran out places to sit no one sat next to him. A girl and her friend sat next to him for awhile, but during the mid beginning part of the semester people dropped classes and classes started getting smaller which meant more seats . When other seats were available they started sitting elsewhere that left Jeff alone on an island of friendless desertion.

By the mid part of early mid part of the semester Jeff had begun to get used to his lone island. At tables desk with 3 computers he had that whole row to himself. Watching people around him interact and help each other did make him depressed still , he had gotten used to being a social outcast, even though he didn't understand it. There was nothing wrong with him on the outside, but he always felt people stayed away from him because they could see what he thought or felt on the inside. Then one day the instructor gave an assignment that required a group . Everyone paired off in their own cliques but there was no one for Jeff. Jeff tried to join in with a group of people he thought might accept but they quickly turned him down , and told him they had enough people, and so did the other groups. Seeing as he was already failing, and was going to fail the assignment anyway Jeff just left out the class and went home.

The next morning Jeff debated whether to go to class or not. What was the point ?He was going to fail either way, why put himself out there in the freezing cold to catch 2 buses to get there to hear in person you're going to fail? He would've stayed home but he remembered that he might get in trouble with financial aid for missing to many days, he was sure he was already on academic probation, and didn't need more problems. an hour later Jeff arrived at the college. He already missed a class and decided to hang out in the computer lab till it was time to start. As usual the class filled up a few minutes later , and everyone took their seats around Jeff's deserted island. After class started an old woman entered the class and spoke to the instructor. After she was done she came in and since there were no other seats available sat next to Jeff. When she sat next to Jeff she looked at him smiled and stared at him for a second. This made Jeff uncomfortable. the old woman seemed normal but something in his gut made him feel uneasy about her. Jeff never let his guard down.

Survived a love potion

Survived a love potion

Created from Booksie.com

Generated: 2015-02-01 01:56:56