

The Self Retreat

The Self Retreat

By : goldenpetal

Poems from Love

Published on Booksie

booksie.com/goldenpetal

Copyright © goldenpetal, 2015
Publish your writing on Booksie.com.

The Self Retreat

I have come today to think about my needs I am the flesh who feels only about me. I thrive on reflection and undo gain and I am centered on acceptance and unnecessary pain. If others do not like me I will get upset and if the world condemns me I will always retreat knowing I am a failure and there is no hope. The death of teenager is failure to succeed and the mutilation of ones body means there is no self esteem. I like all others and am especially guided and fed for the watchful eye needs a comforting bed. The presence of discomfort means I do not feel the best. Yet if the world thinks a lot of me I feel so good for I am a person who wants to be loved and not hurt. To avoid such constant maintenance I can be guided by wisdom and trust for the Lord Jesus Christ will lead me to the best offering a life of joy aside from all the rest. The approval of the Most High will comfort and approve and the pleasures of self centeredness seem so distant as we are guided by His love and truth shaming all other approaches knowing who we are in Christ. So lets see the difference that needs a comparison one will thrive and strive to please itself again and the other way will lead us to victory knowing Jesus died and rose again. Might I recommend a peace that will outlast and put you in a place of reverential love. The blessings outweigh the flesh which is always confused and requires constant attention and will never refuse to give in to other ideas and to a new plan. Just remember both have power and operate right now yet one will lift you up and the other will always fall. Make a choice and see the difference in your eyes for the wealth transfer is here and will never die.

Amen

The Self Retreat

The Self Retreat

Created from Booksie.com

Generated: 2015-01-28 09:29:02