Some of us search for meaning, because without meaning, there's not much left. It could be big, or something so small, that it can seem so insignificant and regardless to some of us. It could be something done, to make a person feel good, or a humble act. Given up something, so someone else can have it. A sacrifice; or a talent. Something achieved. It could be, a smile you put on someones face. Charity work, or good. We all search for meaning, but what if we already had it?
