

MIRROR AND MAN

By : angelin

Mirror has the power to reflect the outward image of things and it is the most fragile of all. Once broken it remains useless. Similar is man's heart. When it is strong, man is powerful enough to rule the world. But with a broken heart he staggers and falls.

Published on Booksie

booksie.com/angelin

Copyright © angelin, 2015

Publish your writing on Booksie.com.

MIRROR AND MAN

MAN AND MIRROR

O Mirror! Proudly you adorn the wall
And reflect the outward image of all.
Be it a crowned head or slave you don't mind
But show their fading visage as designed.
O Mirror! The most fragile of all,
You are sure to sever when you fall.
Man handles you with utmost care
Once broken there's nothing to spare.
You are sharp enough to slay a man
And put an end to his brief life span.

~

Similar to your nature is man's heart
That can either be sturdy or torn apart.
When it's strong, man withstands any storm
And reigns the entire world in the best form.
With a broken heart he staggers in each phase
A Hindered and trapped in the life's long race
Life shatters for those with broken hearts
So it's wise to act smart before one departs.
Triumph or disaster is never fixed to anyone
If man gets to know this, life is always fun.

MIRROR AND MAN

BY VASANTHI PAPU

Â

Â

Â

Â

Â

Â

Â

Â

Â

Â

Â

MIRROR AND MAN

MIRROR AND MAN

Created from Booksie.com

Generated: 2015-01-25 17:35:09