

The Yearning.

The Yearning.

By : ashi17

A poem about the longing of a woman for her love.

Published on Booksie

booksie.com/ashi17

Copyright © ashi17, 2015
Publish your writing on Booksie.com.

The Longing.

Have a desire to be close to you once again to say to you, what I never said before to be lost in your tight embrace
Oh How I have longed to be there!

-

I want to get old with you,
Be by your side, when your hair turn grey
Want to rest my head on your shoulder
Oh how vulnerable I am without you!

-

I want you to be a part of my future
When I am old, and my skin has wrinkled
my eyes might fail to give me a proper sight would you show me whatâs left of the world?

-

I may not understand your soft whispers
But your eyes will always suffice
Telling me all the secrets of your heart
Revealing onto me even what you leave unsaid

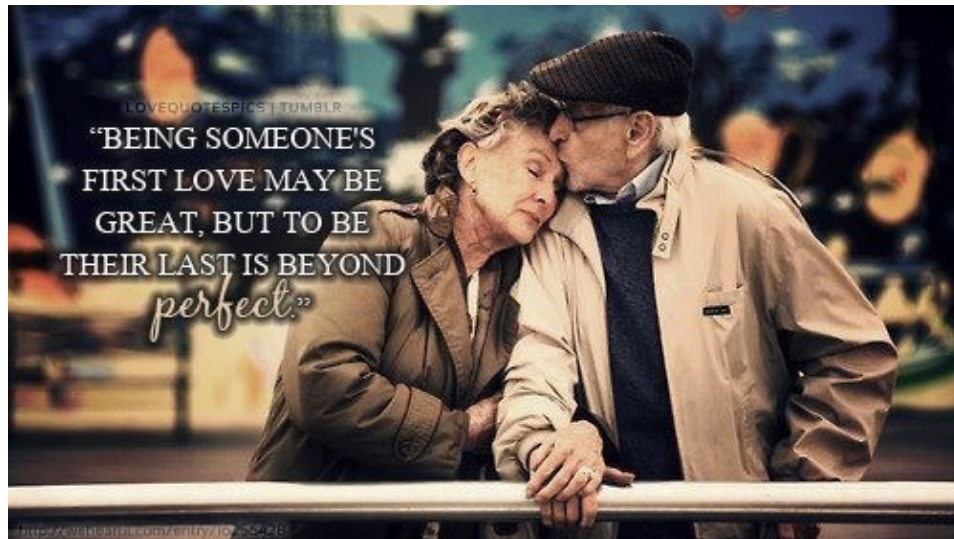

-

I want to sing my love song when you are 100
Would you still feel my love on that day?
I will be there for you, even after death
Would you prefer your final sleep next to my grave?

-

-

-

The Yearning.

The Yearning.

Created from Booksie.com

Generated: 2015-03-04 21:34:21