

Commitment

Commitment

By : attanasio

A poem about a commitment of love.

Published on Booksie

booksie.com/attanasio

Copyright © attanasio, 2015
Publish your writing on Booksie.com.

Commitment

I learned this simple fact
From my high school math
Youâd know if you used your smarts
A whole is the sum of its parts

My physical beating heart
Is made from many a part
Many chambers and valves
Into this, I care not to delve

My loving heart I know
Is made of mind and soul
Together they form
A heart thatâs warm

My soul is life eternal
My very inner kernel
My mind is so complex
So easy to perplex

Filled with wants and needs
Emotional soup it breeds
If you make me want you

Commitment

Thoughts of love will spew

Once I take you to my bed

You will be forever in my head

When thoughts of you consume me

There is no more I, just we

To love you with my whole heart

Is not to play a bit part

I will seal my soul in a box

Give you the key to fit the lock

You will always be on my mind

Iâll think of you all the time

Once I commit to you

My heart will always be true

I am a one-woman man

I hope that you understand

When I give, I give for life

Thatâs why I want you for a wife

Commitment

Commitment

Created from Booksie.com

Generated: 2015-01-27 16:46:07