The Dark Depths of Your Eyes: Desert

I can feel a pounding in my head

Again there is darkness

I can feel something sliding near me

Afraid I try to move

Opening my eyes

Thereâs a harsh sun staring at me

I begin to move

And thatâs when I felt a sting

I look down at my arm

A snake has taken a bite

Again darkness begins to descend

A woman wearing a chestnut colored gown comes my way

I awake within a hut I think

A woman lies near me, staring

Brown curly hair runs down your thighs

Light brown eyes stare deep into mine

Confused as to where I am

I begin to speak at once

My throat however is dry

The Dark Depths of Your Eyes: Desert

You hold a bowl for me to drink off

â Donâ t worryâ you say to me

But how can I not worry

As I look in your eyes

I canâ t help but get lost

You get up and walk out

I think Iâ m supposed to follow

So I get up and follow

You stand in the middle of the desert

Thereâ s nothing out here

Just the sun shining upon us

The air blowing gently against us

I canâ t understand why you seem so normal

I walk closer to you

And you turn to give me a smile

Your eyes look deep into mine

And I ask you for the truth

â Many years have passed

Darkness began since the beginning

And now it has risen even more

Each and every day people fall deeper within

The Dark Depths of Your Eyes: Desert

No soul goes on in life

Without a little darkness inside

It grew so big that time has run out

My sisters, you have seen, have fallen

It will be soon for me to go as well

I am able to feel the darkness

Roaming deep inside of me

My sisters were crushed

Soon I myself will dieâ

Unsure of what you meant I look up

But it was too late

The dark depths of your eyes stared back into mine
