at least i felt something the walls are coming down around me the television is popping and staticky i've been chained by lead to this couch for days and i'm starting to want out and if my brain by some stroke of fate departs at least i'll have a heart And though I try I'm still lying through teeth

I try to grasp it but honesty escapes me
And back to the couch as I start to slouch My dishonesty weighs down my shoulders too much Maybe I'm worthless undoubtedly so
But I still gave you sunshine when you were freezing in snow
And the grave where they lay me will be facing a cliff
As if to say I should've jumped off it

And the beautiful thing about living Is one day you can just give up But with all the pain we suffer with Why should we ask to be forgiven
Why can't we forgive him?
