DISAPPEARING INK

a person writes a note of love and cooing softly as a dove will pen the sweetest things that he can think but when the one he's dreaming of grows nightmare-like with push and shove he wishes he used disappearing ink he buys the girl a diamond ring a house, a car and everything and puts upon her back a fur of mink disharmony may still yet sting the tender tune he used to sing ?

her plans for him have been designed a marriage license on her mind so she can go and lead him to the brink the game is checked when he's resigned the visionary left stone blind
