HOLLOW DRUM

the words will hardly matter if they only make a clatter never coming rather quickly to a point if it's thrust like rocks, volcanic then all reason turns to panic and the oils will rush away and not annoint when you hear a lengthy sermon then its value turns to vermin with a vast array of irritating squeaks wisdom knots itself till loopy fine cuisine becomes quite soupy when the boring drone knows not of what he speaks we are given apparatus but it quickly fades in status when the integers involved don't make a sum when there's clamor with no poise laid you will find the biggest noise made when more hollow is the chamber of the drum
