ISLAND ACROSS THE SEA

there lies a lovely island i can see it from my home i think i'd love to live there but unsure if i should roam for the space between is mighty and the waves could pull and toss and there's no guarantees here that i'd safely get across i hear a seagull crying in that strange enchanting land its like a siren calling and the words i understand so i'm making my craft ready for this trek across the bay i know that on this journey they'll be traps along the way but i need a new adventure for the old one's lost its thrill and so i'll pull my anchor steady winds, my sails, will fill and i'll set across the water with my eye upon the prize i shall not look behind me for ahead, my treasure lies and when i reach that island i will reach eternity for my life will soon be worthless if i do not cross this sea
