PLAYING THE JOKER

if life's a game

then you're to blame if leaving things to risk a roll of dice
an armed device
a wildly spinning disc a pea beneath a nutshell that's recruited to deceive no need to play the joker when an ace is up your sleeve so if your life is fraught with strife the sand inside it, stilled a useless mass, this empty glass it's time to get it filled the sun may be more brilliant but the moon has much more pull

no need to play the joker
when you know your house is full if quick to moan

that you're alone
it's time to take a chance horizon lines revealing signs of dawns of new romance the sky will be exploding in a magic, yet unseen
no need to play the joker
when the king has found his queen
