PUZZLE FACTORY

my friend went nuts the other day he climbed out of his shell he got a one way ticket to the lunatic hotel

the ambulance was padded like a little cotton box his wrists and ankles shackled with a vast array of locks and down the road they scurried while the siren howled with glee they pulled up to the entrance of the puzzle factory they showed him to his boudoir and his ratty little bunk where a hundred slept before him oh my goodness, how it stunk they let him out for recess in a little playground yard he sat upon the mood swings and he really rode them hard the day he could have visitors the best it ever gets i brought him chocolate candy bars and packs of cigarettes i don't think he'll get better he is too far up the tree seems there's never happy endings at the puzzle factory
