THE CLOUDS CONSUMED THE MOON

the beasts all cower shyly for they feel a eerie rift the world is tilting shyly in an atmospheric shift the angels must be sleeping and the devil's coming soon the die is cast it seems at last

all eyes retract in tension from the darkening of night the mask of apprehension has delivered them from sight the sage has thoughts suspended and the piper stills his tune the end of dreams or so it seems

God's creatures, once evolving are now orphans forced to roam the walls begin dissolving in the place they knew as home the newly born discover they are trapped in their cocoon there is no light for on this night
