Realising the futility of looking backwards in time. Your past is valid - yet it is not as valid as your future, no matter what your age.

Looking For Me

Looking For Me.

ã

Iâ m looking for me perpetually
As I pound the paths and part the grass.
Iâ m snared in my trap beyond full circle,
Deep in a spiral of nostalgia so viral,
As I continue and fail in my search for me.

Iâ m looking for me continually
As I stroll the dunes and stroke the pines.
I stand where I stood, I jump where I jumped,
I climb where I climbed and all of the time
All I want to find is me.

Iâ m looking for me so desperately
As I sit and I write with my pores fully open
To try and absorb my past that is woven
So deep in the present, my mood isnâ t pleasant
As I choose another path to look for me.

Iâ m looking for me and itâ s frightening me,
That the harder I look and the more that I see
That reminds me of me but the me that eludes me and I hope to find

Looking For Me

Is buried deep within my troubled mind
As onward I grind Iâ€™m frantic to find â€” me.

Iâ€™m looking for me and itâ€™s frustrating me
That the village I love is so horribly cruel
To hide me from me, Iâ€™m a dreamer, a fool.
A nostalgia peddler treading water in a pool
Of stationary fish in which my only wish is to find me.

Iâ€™m looking for me and I want you to see
That this twee little rhyme isnâ€™t helping me.
Itâ€™s just killing time, my present feels like a mime,
As I continue cynically to hunt for me.

Iâ€™m looking for me and itâ€™s boring me.
This has long since ceased to entertain me.
The past is a thread that leaves my present scared,
And Iâ€™ve become overwhelmed at the stupidity
And futility of looking for me.

Looking for me used to strengthen me.
But all it does now is worry me.
An excuse for a walk and a chat with myself.
An unhealthy fascination, a self indulgent delve
Back into a life and an attempt to weld
The present to the past, oh how very me

Looking For Me

To squander my time looking for me.
