ABANDONED PARENTS

Once young, now old, battered and worn
Parents abandoned by children earn their scorn

Forgetting the love once parents showered their way
Rearing and protecting, raising them up, night and day

Left alone, discarded and forgotten, they await Withering away, victims of cruel fate

Holding memories of yesteryear, vanished and gone
When life was full of pleasure and a beautiful song

Knowing neither weakness of body or mind
When love and joy were thereâs to find

Now old, they lie alone and often cry
Yearning for love, they moan and sigh

None to hear their lament and cries
No one attends to their hue and fies

Death brings relief to the weary old
The curtain of life draws to a close
