

Love is a Win

By : SakuraAngel

Jennifer: She dislikes Daniel. He was rude to her since the day she met him. Even though she's been in the same class as him for 2 years, she would always ignore him. But why does he keep stealing glances her way? Also, why does she bother thinking about him? Daniel: It was love at first sight. The way her hair flutters, her soft and sweet voice, he's head over heels in love with Jennifer. Yet, he can't bring himself to talk to her, though in the same class for 2 years. All he can do is watch from afar. How would love fix this misunderstanding? Note: Chapters 1-4 are previews

Published on Booksie

booksie.com/SakuraAngel

Copyright © SakuraAngel, 2015
Publish your writing on Booksie.com.

Rainy day- Jennifer's side

I don't like his kind. The ones who would laugh at everything, funny or not. He fools around and never takes anything seriously. The first time we met was a rainy day back in 9th grade. It was the first day of school. I was walking to school when Daniel was jogging by. I recognized his face from around school. He was soaked, and he didn't have an umbrella. He started running and took shelter under a building. I felt bad for him! He was going to school all alone, soaking wet. I walked towards the building he was taking shelter at and pulled a handkerchief out of my backpack. "Here, you need this, right?" I asked.

He did was look up at me for a minute or two. He rapidly looked back down. He yanked the handkerchief out of my hand and ran off again. I stood there, confused. "Not even a thank you?!" Thought Jennifer. He was outrageously rude! I stood up and stomped off to school. When I arrived, he was no where in sight, and I wanted my handkerchief back. Only feeling mad, I stormed off to class.

Love is a Win

Love is a Win

Created from Booksie.com

Generated: 2015-01-27 16:17:27